GERMANS NOW OCCUPY BELGIAN CAPITAL

BELGIANS PUT UP BRAVE RESISTENCE BUT ARE OVERWHELMED BY INVADERS

King Albert, of Belgium, and His Cabinet Have Removed to Antwerp

ANTWERP BEING PREPARED FOR ATTACK

70,000 British Troops Said to be in That City, Awaiting an Assault by the German Forces—Defenses of Antwerp Being Strengthened and Resistance to the Forward Movements of the Kaiser's Troops is Expected to be Desperate—Belgians at Brussels Were Defeated Because They Were Outnumbered by the Germans—German Soldiers Reported to Have Slain Private Citizens.

(By International News Service)
Ghent, Aug. 21.—The German troops entered Brussels yesterday afternoon. King Albert of Belgium has arrived at Antwerp. The German cavalry established their headquarters at the Hotel Deville. The Germans have inaugurated a provisional government for Brussels.

The defenses of Antwerp are being strengthened preparatory to an expected siege, and the outlying woods are being destroyed to prevent the Germans from using them as a cover in the attack. Thousands of cattle and sheep are being driven into the Antwerp driving parks to be used for food for the defenders of the city.

75,000 British Troops in City.

It is reported that 75,000 British troops are in Antwerp and its environs, awaiting the German attack. Guns from the British warships have been removed to the city and will be used against the invaders.

"Yesterday's fighting at Aerschot was extremely hot. The appearance of two German aviators was the first intimation that the Germans, who had been repulsed on the previous evening, intended to renew the attack. Flying low, the German aviators surveyed the position and then returned to report."

Belgians Fought Bravely.

Soon afterward, the German infantry, supported by machine guns and artillery, opened a fierce attack. The Belgians were outnumbered, but put up a desperate resistance.

The troops on both sides fought like demons, and the battle soon became a veritable butchery. Two Belgian regiments, which already had distinguished themselves in the forts at Liege, held the invaders in check for two hours. Both sides were losing heavily when the retreat was sounded.

Major Gilson, whose nose had been broken by a bullet, took charge of the Belgian rear guard, which fought so stubbornly that only seven out of his force of 288 returned.

Retirement Explained.

Paris, Aug. 21.—War office interprets the shotless fall of Brussels as a strategic movement, catching the German army in a trap, adding: "The Germans caught between Antwerp and Namur, now lack the first requirement for a march through Belgium, namely, free passage by the river Meuse through Liege and Namur." Japan's War Preparations Going Ahead Rapidly

(By International News Service)
Tokio, Aug. 21.—The government has declared a strict censorship of war news. Censors are scrutinizing all dispatches. Preparations for a war with Germany are going ahead rapidly. The newspapers display the statement of Japan's ultimatum sent to Germany, at the request of England, after a long diplomatic consultation. Kaiser Will Not Yield.

London, Aug. 21.—According to information received in official circles last evening Emperor William has ordered that resistance be made to the last to Japan's attempt to oust Germany from Kiaochow.

FIVE PERSONS KILLED AND MANY INJURED IN STORM

Five persons killed, seven seriously injured and twenty five others less, partially hit in Wilkes-Barre yesterday when a severe electrical storm approaching a cyclone in force, swept the southern section, known as the Heights, and part of the Wilkes-Barre township.

It was part of this storm that visited Clearfield, bringing with it hail and severe electrical displays.

Pope's Body Viewed by Hundreds

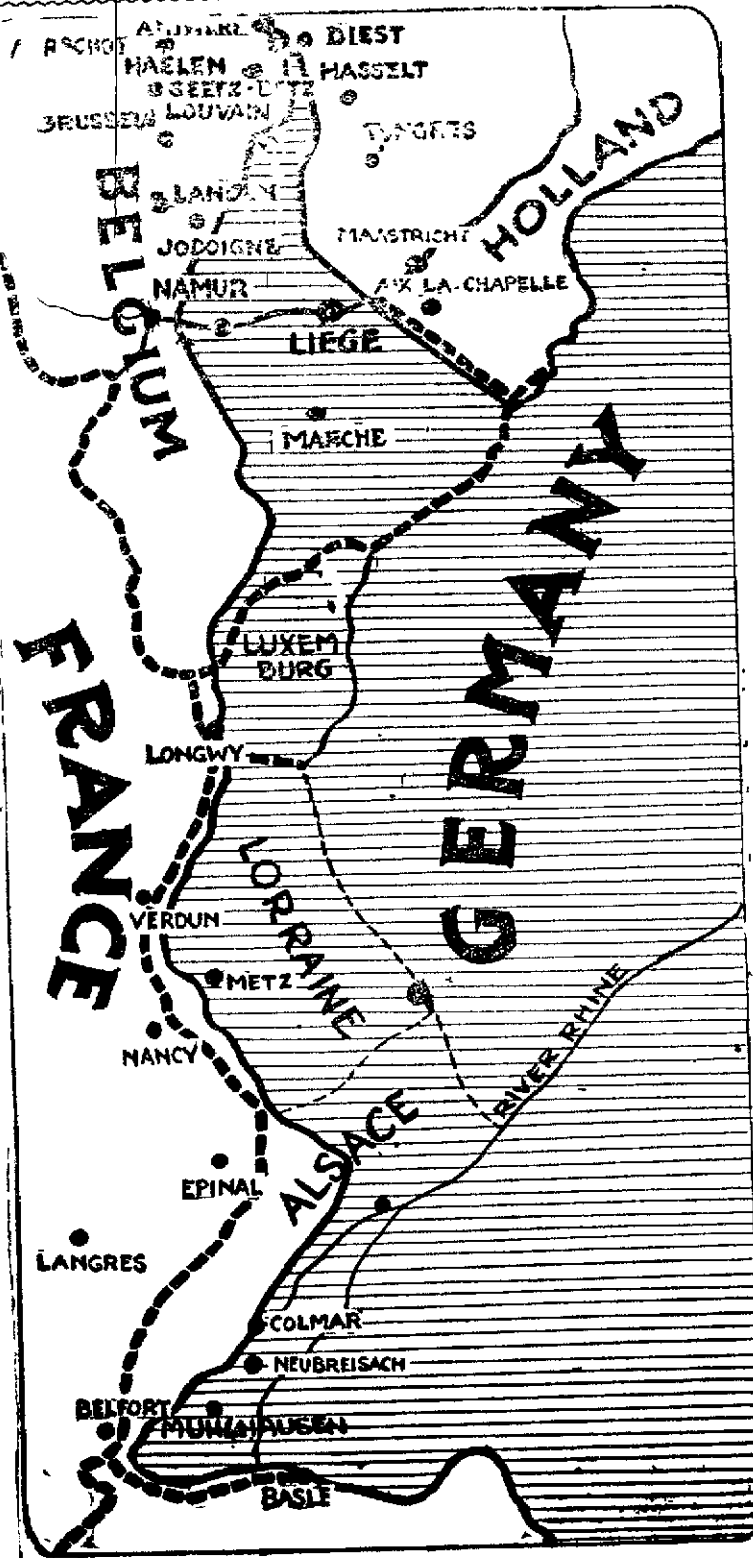

(By International News Service)
Rome, Aug. 21.—The pope's sister is not dead, as reported, but is low from shock.

The pope's body was removed today to St. Peter's where thousands of mourners are hourly passing the bier. There is a movement by the so-called political cardinals to have a truce declared during the funeral period.

NEW BOILER HOUSE AT PHILIPSBURG COMPLETED

The new 500 horse power boiler at the Penn Public Service company's power plant in Philipsburg was fired a day or two ago. Inasmuch as that plant furnishes electricity to Clearfield, Curwensville, Osceola, Philipsburg and many other towns in this region, this increased power capacity will be greatly appreciated by the many patrons of the company assuring, as it does, an improved service.

R. L. Lenig, who has served as postmaster at Allport since 1900, has just received notice that he successfully passed the civil service examination and has been classified as postmaster under the president's order of May 1913.

Sugar Producers Explain That It Is Too Early for the Beet Sugar Crop to be Manufactured—Smaller Cargoes of Foodstuffs Being Taken to Europe on Vessels.

(By International News Service)
Washington, Aug. 21.—Attorney General McReynolds is reported to be preparing to draw indictments against the boosters of food prices. The president has urged McReynolds "to go the limit."

The second batch of indictments is in sight against the "food trust."

Sugar Men Explain.
New York, Aug. 21.—The domestic sugar producers issued a statement disclaiming responsibility for the present high prices of sugar. Except in California where beets mature earlier than elsewhere in the United States, the season for beet phenomenon is visible, also, in part of North America, in that strip reaching down nearly to New York—Eclipse happens at the end of every eighteen years.

(SPECIAL TO THE PROGRESS)
Were the world a little less advanced, there probably would have been the wildest consternation today in Russia and throughout that part of Europe embroiled in war, because at noon there was an eclipse of the sun that was total over a part of Russia and was partial over all that part of the continent where men were fighting.

Despite the wide-spread knowledge of astronomy of the present day, it may well be said that the peasants of Central Europe and Russia, drafted as they have been from their homes and fields to fight in a warlike purpose of

NINE MOTORMEN KILLED AT THE ERITON COLLIERY

Wednesday evening about 9:30 o'clock Charles Nelson, a motorman, employed in the Eriton mines, was instantly killed by being caught between a car and the mine rib. While taking the cars into the mines he left a switch open and in coming out the cars ran into the open switch and Nelson was crushed between the cars and rib and instantly killed. He was nineteen years of age and single. The remains were moved to the undertaking establishment of N. R. Moore where they will be prepared for burial.

GOLD MEDAL CONTEST AT W. C. T. U. CONVENTION

The annual W. C. T. U. convention will be held at DuBois on September 3 and 4. One of the enjoyable features will be a gold medal contest, which will be given Thursday evening September 3.

The following contestants will participate: Misses Ruth and Florence Conrath, Mahaffey; Dorothy Bell, Mahaffey, R. D.; Helen Gould, Bells Landing; Wilma Nolan, Curry Run; Myra Lynch and Grace Steffy, DuBois. Prominent citizens of the county will act as judges, and a beautiful gold medal will be given to the contestant securing the highest number of points.

The contest will be given in the Evangelical church, DuBois. All sessions of the W. C. T. U. convention, including the contest, are free to everyone.

British Aeroplane Falls and Pilot is Killed

(By International News Service.)

Paris, Aug. 21.—British aeroplane number 391 fell, it is reported at the war office, (location censored.)

Pilot A. F. Seard was killed and the observer, Robert Smith Barry was injured, but is likely to recover. The machine was flying 1,200 feet high. Note, probably operating in the suburbs of Antwerp.

(By International News Service)
Paris, Aug. 21.—The war office inferentially admits that the Germans are driving a wedge between the French operating on the Belgian frontier and the right wing invading Alsace. The latter has fallen back before the Germans to the Seille river.

Unlocked for Check.
This unlocked for check threatens to interfere seriously with the Alsatian campaign, despite the recapture of Muelhausen from the Germans. The German losses there are now learned to have been appalling.

Rough Rider Brigade.
The war office announces the organization complete of "Rough Rider" squads, some of whom are American globe trotter soldiers of fortune.

The Rough Riders will operate chiefly as scouts on reconnoitering expeditions and spy work. A fleet of armored automobiles is included in their equipment.

Report Only One Reverse.
London, Aug. 21.—A Central News dispatch from Berlin states that the yesterday was at Schirmeck, on the only reverse the Germans suffered Strassburg road.

A dispatch to the Times from Paris says that the first point at which the Germans crossed the French frontier was at Cirey-sur-Vesou. Since then there has been continued fighting in that region until a day or two ago when it ended in the victorious advance of the French forces, who inflicted a decisive defeat on the enemy and drove them back across the frontier at Lunville.

The correspondent says that the laconic reports of the French minister of war give little idea of the desperate struggle that occurred around a handful of villages scattered along the French border. Point after point was taken and retaken by one side or the other.

America Will Reject Proposal.
Washington, Aug. 21.—President Wilson still has not been officially informed of China's request that America assume trusteeship over Kiaochow. The highest official circles state the president is certain to reject the proposition, being strongly opposed to anything comprising America's neutrality.

Auto Victims Improving.
The girls who were hurt in the Brown automobile accident are all getting along very nicely at the hospital.

The Bigler campmeeting opened today and will be the mecca for hundreds of people for the next ten days.

Good evening! Endeavor to be a good booster and many of your sins will be forgiven.

Any way, little Belgium gave the kaiser's troops a good run for their money.

When two or more men get together these days they are either talking war or baseball.

William Watson, England's poet laureate, has written a poem on the siege of Liege, for which poem, it ought to be said at the start, the Belgians are not to be held responsible.

Will somebody explain why it is necessary for a crowd of a half-hundred young men and women to escort a half dozen passengers to the railroad station on Sunday evenings?

Clearfield firemen are either too bashful or lack energy when it comes to asking for the annual convention of the firemen's association of this district. Phillipsburg firemen go after what they want and generally get it.

By the way, what with the singing of foreign songs, why not give us that good old American song, "The Star Spangled Banner," oftener? Even those foreign born citizens who are taking great interest in the war in Europe might join in singing the national song of the country in which they make their living without doing injury to their consciences.

CLEARFIELD COUNTY SOIL.

When the Clearfield county farmer is urged to buy farming lands in the north, west or south he is often told untruths to induce him to abandon the lands in Clearfield to try the experiment of farming in an unknown climate and under conditions entirely different from those which surround him at home. It is not denied that there are some good farms elsewhere, but it is equally true that the soil of Clearfield county, if properly worked and intelligently fertilized, is equal in productive powers to that of any other part of the country.

The man who cannot make good in Clearfield county will not make good in any other part of the country. No farmer can make a living in Canada, Florida or California unless he has money with which to maintain himself and family until his new farm is productive. The farmer who remains in Clearfield county can get along as well in this county as he would in any of the above places, if he will give his everybody's gettin' a change but me."

Reassured
"Daughter," called the irate father

attention to his farm. Going somewhere else with the expectation that the land is so rich that crops will grow without any effort on the part of the farmer is as foolish as to expect a fortune from an inmate of an almshouse.

There are farmers in Clearfield who have made a success of the business of tilling the soil. These are the farmers who cannot be lured away from their home county by statements of the great productiveness of the bleak prairies of Canada, the mosquito-infested lands of New Jersey or the agent-plastered sandhills of the south. Almost any citizens can name farmers in Clearfield county who have grown wonderful crops because they know how to farm and are content with the unsurpassed climate of this country. And what is said here relative to the farmer is equally applicable to the fruit grower.

THE DEATH OF THE POPE.

To the believers in the Catholic faith the death of Pope Pius X brings as much grief and regret as would the death of any of the rulers of Europe to their subjects. Pope Pius was born a peasant and attained his high position in the church through his natural talents and his personal efforts. He is spoken of as a man who lived simply, thus setting an example which taught honesty, sobriety and peace.

That the pope's death was hastened by the course being pursued by the rulers of Europe who are now engaged in battling against each other in a war of aggression there is not the least doubt. The present war was regarded with horror by the pope, as it must be by all civilized people, but the aged pontiff's heart was so grieved by the butchery which is going on that he neglected to care for himself and thus gave his disease a chance to overcome him.

THAT EXPERT'S FIGURES.

There is nothing to be wondered at in borough council's expression of dissatisfaction with the figures presented by the expert employed by the water company relative to the financial and physical condition of the Clearfield Water company. Those figures are not what council wanted. They were apparently submitted to confuse the public mind and cause the friends of municipal ownership of public utilities to abandon the hope of owning the water plant.

We believe the water company is earnest in its desire to give the council the information the latter asks for relative to the water plant, but the expert accountant has done nothing more than muddle the matter, failing to give council the actual cost of construction and maintenance of the water plant. The water company, having the figures of the expert at its command, can meet the council's wishes, and will no doubt do so, within the time allotted for the acquisition of the desired information.

A Stay-at-Home.

"No. If everybody voted all the help in the house would be sure to want the day off every time there was an election."—Washington Star.

Cause for Complaint.

Sandy McTavish was sitting weeping at his fireside.
"Eh, Sandy, mon," said a neighbor, peeping in at the open window, attracted by the signs of woe, "what's ailin' ye?"
"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" sobbed Sandy. "Donald McPherson's wife is died."
"Aweel," said the neighbor, "what's o' that? She's nae relation o' yours, ye ken."
"I ken she's no," wailed Sandy. "I ken she's no; but it jist seems as if

THE CASE OF JENNIE BRICE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"Employing my leisure time in writing a play," quoted Mr. Howell. "Exactly. The husband and wife were not on good terms. They quarreled frequently. On Sunday they fought all day, and Mrs. Ladley told Mrs. Pitman she was married to a fiend. At 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon Philip Ladley went out, returning about 5. Mrs. Pitman carried their supper to them at 6, and both ate heartily. She did not see Mrs. Ladley at the time, but heard her in the next room. They were apparently reconciled. Mrs. Pitman reports Mr. Ladley in high good humor. If the quarrel recommenced during the night the other boarder, named Reynolds, in the next room heard nothing. Mrs. Pitman was up and down until 1 o'clock, when she dozed off. She heard no unusual sound.

"At approximately 2 o'clock in the morning, however, this Reynolds came to the room and said he had heard some one in a boat in the lower hall. He and Mrs. Pitman investigated. The boat, which Mrs. Pitman uses during a flood and which she had tied to the stair rail was gone, having been cut loose, not untied. Everything else was quiet, except that Mrs. Ladley's dog had been shut in a third story room.

"At a quarter after 4 that morning Mrs. Pitman, thoroughly awake, heard the boat returning and, going to the stairs, met Ladley coming in. He muttered something about having gone for medicine for his wife and went to his room, shutting the dog out. This is worth attention, for the dog ordinarily slept in their room."

"What sort of a dog?" asked Mr. Howell. He had been listening attentively.

"A water spaniel. The rest of the night or early morning was quiet. At a quarter after 7 Ladley asked for coffee and toast for one, and on Mrs. Pitman remarking this said that his wife was not playing this week and had gone for a few days' vacation, having left early in the morning. Remember, during the night he had been out for medicine for her. Now she was able to travel and, in fact, had started."

Mr. Howell was frowning at the floor. "If he was doing anything wrong, he was doing it very badly," he said.

"This is where I entered the case," said Mr. Holcombe. "I rowed into the lower hall this morning to feed the dog Peter, who was whining on the staircase. Mrs. Pitman was coming down, pale and agitated over the fact that the dog shortly before had found floating in the parlor downstairs a slipper belonging to Mrs. Ladley and later a knife with a broken blade. She maintains that she had the knife last night upstairs, that it was not broken and that it was taken from a shelf in her room while she dozed. The question is, then, Why was the knife taken? Who took it and why? Has this man made away with his wife or has he not?"

Mr. Howell looked at me and smiled. "Mr. Holcombe and I are old enemies," he said. "Mr. Holcombe believes that circumstantial evidence may probably hang a man; I do not." And to Mr. Holcombe, "So, having found a wet slipper and a broken knife, you are prepared for murder and sudden death?"

"I have more evidence," Mr. Holcombe said eagerly, and proceeded to tell what we had found in the room. Mr. Howell listened, smiling to himself, but at the mention of the onyx clock he got up and went to the mantel.

"By Jove!" he said and stood looking at the mark in the dust. "Are you sure the clock was here yesterday?"

"I found it right before last and put the key underneath. Yesterday, before they moved up, I found it again."

"The key is gone also. Well, what of it, Holcombe? Did he brain her with the clock or choke her with the key?"

Mr. Holcombe was looking at his notebook. "To summarize," he said, "we have here as clues indicating a crime, the rope, the broken knife, the slipper, the towel and the clock. Besides, this scrap of paper may contain some information." He opened it and sat gazing at it in his palm. "Then, 'Is this Ladley's writing?'" he asked me in a curious voice.

"Yes."

I glanced at the slip. Mr. Holcombe had just read from his notebook: "Rope, knife, slipper, towel, clock."

The slip I had found behind the washstand said "Rope, knife, shoe, towel. Horn." The rest of the last word was torn off.

Mr. Howell was staring at the mantel. "Clock?" he repeated.

CHAPTER IV.

It was after four when Mr. Holcombe had finished going over the room. I offered to make both the gentlemen some tea, for Mr. Pitman had been an Englishman, and I had got into the habit of having a cupful in the afternoon, with a cracker or a bit of bread. But they refused. Mr. Howell said he had promised to meet a lady, and to bring her through the flooded district in a boat. He shook hands with me and smiled at Mr. Holcombe.

"You will have to restrain his enthusiasm, Mrs. Pitman," he said. "He is a bloodhound on the scent. If his baying gets on your nerves just send for me." He went down the stairs and stepped into the boat. "Remember, Holcombe," he called, "every well constituted murder has two things—a motive and a corpse. You haven't either, only a mass of piling details."

"If everybody waited until he saw flames instead of relying on the testimony of the smoke," Mr. Holcombe snapped, "what would the fire loss be?"

Mr. Howell poled his boat to the front door and, sitting down, prepared to row out.

"You are warned, Mrs. Pitman," he called to me. "If he doesn't find a body to fit the clues he's quite capable of making one to fill the demand."

"Horn!" said Mr. Holcombe, looking at the slip again. "The tail of the 'n' is torn off—evidently only part of a word. Hornet, Horning, Horner—Mrs. Pitman, will you go with me to the police station?"

I was more than anxious to go. In fact, I could not bear the idea of staying alone in the house, with heaven only knows what concealed in the depths of that muddy flood. I got on my wryms again, and Mr. Holcombe rowed me out. Peter plunged into the water to follow and had to be sent back. He sat on the lower step and whined. Mr. Holcombe threw him another piece of liver, but he did not touch it.

We rowed to the corner of Robinson

I Told Him Everything.

street and Federal—it was before Federal street was raised above the flood level—and left the boat in charge of a boy there. And we walked to the police station. On the way Mr. Holcombe questioned me closely about the events of the morning, and I recalled the incident of the burned pillow slip. He made a note of it at once and grew very thoughtful.

He left me, however, at the police station. "I'd rather not appear in this, Mrs. Pitman," he said apologetically, "and I think better along my own lines—not that I have anything against the police; they've done some splendid work. But this case takes imagination, and the police department deals with facts. We have no facts yet. What we need, of course, is to have the man detained until we are sure of our case."

He lifted his hat and turned away, and I went slowly up the steps to the police station. Living, as I had, in a neighborhood where the police, like the poor, are always with us, and where the visits of the patrol wagon are one of those familiar sights that no amount of repetition enabled any of us to treat with contempt, I was uncomfortable until I remembered that my grandfather had been one of the first mayors of the city and that, if the patrol had been at my house more than once, the entire neighborhood would testify that my boarders were usually orderly.

At the door some one touched me on the arm. It was Mr. Holcombe's again. "I have been thinking it over," he said, "and I believe you'd better not mention the piece of paper that you found behind the washstand. They might say the whole thing is a hoax."

"Very well," I agreed, and went in. The police sergeant in charge knew me at once, having stopped at my house more than once in flood time for a cup of hot coffee.

"Sit down, Mrs. Pitman," he said. "I suppose you are still making the best coffee and doughnuts in the city of Allegheny? Well, what's the trouble in your district? Want an injunction against the river for trespass?"

"The river has brought me a good bit of trouble," I said. "I'm—I'm worried, Mr. Sergeant. I think a woman from my house has been murdered, but I don't know."

"Murdered?" he said, and drew up his chair. "Tell me about it."

I told him everything, while he sat back with his eyes half closed and his fingers beating a tattoo on the arm of his chair.

When I finished he got up and went into an inner room. He came back in a moment.

"I want you to come in and tell that to the chief," he said, and led the way. All told, I repeated my story three times that afternoon—to the sergeant to the chief of police and the third time to both the others and two detectives.

The second time the chief made notes of what I said.

"Know this man Ladley?" he asked the others. None of them did, but they all knew of Jennie Brice and some of them had seen her in the theater.

"Get the theater, Tom," the chief said to one of the detectives.

Luckily what he learned over the telephone from the theater corroborated my story. Jennie Brice was not in the cast that week, but should have reported that morning (Monday) to rehearse the next week's piece. No message had been received from her and a substitute had been put in her place.

The chief hung up the receiver and turned to me. "You are sure about the clock, Mrs. Pitman?" he asked. "It was there when they moved upstairs to the room?"

"Yes, sir."

"You are certain you will not find it on the parlor mantel when the water goes down?"

"The mantels are uncovered now. It is not there."

"You think Ladley has gone for good?"

"Yes, sir."

"He'd be a fool to try to run away, unless—Graves, you'd better get hold of the fellow, and keep him until either the woman is found or the body. The river is falling. In a couple of days we will know if she is around the premises anywhere."

Before I left I described Jennie Brice for them carefully. Asked what she probably wore, if she had gone away as her husband said, I had no idea; she had a lot of clothes, and dressed a good bit. But I recalled that I had seen lying on the bed the black and white dress with the red collar, and they took that down, as well as the brown valise.

The chief rose and opened the door for me. "If she actually left town at the time you mention," he said, "she ought not to be hard to find. There are not many trains before 7 in the morning, and most of them are local."

"Not unless Ladley is more of a fool than I think he is," he said, smiling. "Personally I believe she has gone away, as he says she did. But if she hasn't, he probably took the body with him when he said he was getting medicine and dropped it in the current somewhere. But we must go slow with all this. There's no use shouting 'wolf' yet."

"But—the towel?"

"He may have cut himself shaving. It has been done."

"And the knife?"

He shrugged his shoulders good naturedly.

"I've seen a perfectly good knife spoiled opening a bottle of pickles."

"But the slipper? And the clock?"

"My good woman, enough shoes and slippers are forgotten in the bottoms of cupboards year after year in flood time and are found floating around the streets to make all the old clothes men in town happy. I have seen almost everything floating about during one of these annual floods."

"I dare say you never saw an onyx clock floating around," I replied a little sharply. I had no sense of humor that day. He stopped smiling at once and stood tugging at his mustache.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

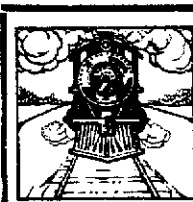

Take Salts to flush Kidneys and neutralize irritating acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning scalding sensation and is very pro-irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse use again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs while then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

ENGLISHMEN DISCUSSES PAY OF R. R. EMPLOYEES

James H. Thomas, labor member of parliament for Derby, England, and financial secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, corresponding to one of the brotherhoods of railway employees in this country, is visiting Pittsburgh, among other places, en tour, investigating railway operation here in his official capacity as a member of the British parliament.

Yesterday he was entertained with a luncheon and in the course of some remarks made in response to a toast declared that American railway employees are very much more adequately compensated than are those elsewhere, even taking into account the higher cost of living in this country, which, he said, with the sole exception of rents, does not exceed that in England by more than 40 per cent whereas wages for relative classes of labor are more than double. He has found, also, he added, that first cost of railway construction is lower here than abroad owing to lower cost of land for right-of-way and terminals, more economical administration and the use of rolling stock of far greater capacity and much more powerful motive power, from which he deduces that an American railroad is able to perform a standard unit of service at less cost than an English road. In conclusion, Mr. Thomas declared he has not found nearly the sentiment for government ownership of the rail carriers here that obtains in England.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Pennsy Mechanic in Cabinet. The man who conducts the transportation of all the troops of the Russian empire, a member of the czar's cabinet, minister of ways of communication for Russia and director for the czar of the longest railroad in the world, Prince Khilkoff, was not many years ago a obscure mechanic in the shops of the Pennsylvania railroad in Altoona, Pa. The story of his romantic rise to a place of trust and counsel under the czar was recently told by a traveler in Russia who had the honor of the prince's acquaintance in making a study of railroad conditions in the empire.

New Cherry Tree Branch. The Pennsylvania railroad has awarded to A. L. Anderson & Bros., Inc., of Altoona, the contract for 3 1-2 miles of single track extension of the Homer & Cherry Tree branch of the Conemaugh division to tap coal lands in Indiana county.

The firm has about completed considerable work along the Buffalo & Allegheny division of the Pennsylvania railroad, and also held contract for the making of improvements along the Crookston division between Crookston and Ebensburg.

MILTON STOCK AND HIS FAMOUS FLUKE HOME RUN

BY FRANK G. MENKE

(By International News Service)

New York, Aug. 21.—Milton Stock, the Giant's third sacker, treated himself to a fluke home run the other day and it immediately started discussion concerning freak and lengthy circuit swats. Many trotted forth stories of other home runs, but it was voted that Stock was about the flukeiest that had happened in a long time.

Stock's drive smashed into the bag at third base and then bounced into one of the boxes. The rival third sacker recovered the ball almost before Stock had rounded first, but the umpires, declaring the ball had landed outside the playing field, after first hitting fair, gave Stock a home.

"Cy" Young, the old Cleveland pitcher, hit out a four bagger in Cleveland one day. The ball skimmed along the first base line and made for the score board which then was in short right field. The ball hit under the board and into the little space between the board and a fence. Before the outfielder could dig it out, "Cy," who frequently has made 100 yards in 47 seconds, "tore" around the bases and was credited with a homer.

"Big Bill" Lange, who played with the Chicago team in the old days, whaled a ball over the center field fence in Cincinnati one day. It crashed through the window of a saloon across the street and broke up a pinocle party just as one of the players was on the point of melding some thing like 400.

"Buck" Freeman, also known as "Home-Run" Freeman, connected with one of Chief Bender's twisters in a game at Philadelphia and, not only lifted the ball out of the lot, but drove it through an open window on the second floor of a house that was a block away from the park.

Joe Jackson, of the Naps, in the opinion of baseball veterans, hit the longest home run in the history of baseball. It was in a game in New York last year. Joe's drive cleared the top of the lofty right field grandstand by at least 40 feet. When last seen, the ball was traveling at a terrific clip, and it was estimated that before the ball landed, it must have been 250 feet clear of the park.

"Home" Zimmerman, the quiet, unassuming, peace-loving third baseman of the Cubs, rapped out a brace of homers in one day in Cincinnati. They cleared the center field fence by about 10 feet each. Home is the only player who ever turned the trick in that ball park.

Miller Huggins, of the Cardinals, got a fluke home run. It happened in Cincinnati. Many odd things happen there. Miller lifted a short fly to right. The sun got in the fielder's eye, and the ball dropped ten feet away from him. Before the outfielder could rub the glare out of his peepers, Miller shipped around the bases.

"Buddy" Ryan once upon a time with the Naps poked out a homer with the bases full in Cleveland a year or two ago. It was one of the few times in baseball history that this four-runs-with-one-smash stunt has been accomplished.

Larry Doyle, of the Giants carved his name in baseball's hall of fame a few weeks ago when he picked out a four bagger in the twenty first inning of the Giants Pirates game. His swat ended the longest combat in big league history.

SILK HAT HARRY'S DIVORCE SUIT

BY TAD

Walter Johnson, one of the Senators, does not hit 'em often but when he does, there's happening.

He connected with a ball in Washington sometime back and hit it so hard he knocked off the cover. The cover landed over second base and the rest of the ball landed a few miles outside the ball park.

Larry Doyle has another claim to fame other than that which came through his blow in Pittsburg. Playing on the Pacific coast, he smashed the ball through the only knothole in the fence. It was in right field. The hole was just a trifle larger than the ball, but Larry drove it square at the hole, and the ball, instead of coming in off, went through.

Cy Seymour hit a ball in Boston and it never touched ground until it reached New York. Cy's drive cleared the fence and the ball dropped in to one of the open cars of a freight train that was passing at the time. It was found by a brakeman when the train reached Gotham.

IN THE MOVIES

"WHEN THE HEART CALLS" IS A HEARTSOME PICTURE

"When the Heart Calls" is a 2 reel jump drama. It is a lovely old man wanders by the lake side in the country. One of the men, a young man, notices the poverty of the home and in heart is torn. Then he makes a discovery. This is the home of his son whom he lost because he did not marry. The father wished him to be a son in broken in health and the family are nearly destitute. When the heart calls reason departs. Social restriction are forgotten everything is smothered in that one great passion of the human soul the desire for friendship love and sympathy.

Rich in sentiment, tremendously appealing, the play which will be shown at the Opera house this evening demands attention from every one.

A Dramatic Mistake

Snitz is so ardent an admirer of the stage that he overlooks such small things as rent. The landlady asks his wife for the rent. After a long persuasion from the landlady's husband who is also too strong to work, Snitz starts in search of a job. Naturally he turns to the stage as an appropriate vocation. He applies to the local temple of Thespis.

but in spite of his showing samples of applied histrionics, he is cruelly turned down. He returns home discouraged.

In the meantime the leading man of the troupe, which is about to play Virginia, becomes incapacitated through too frequent visits with John Barleycorn. The stage manager is in desperation and takes the costume and part to Snitz with instructions to prepare for the matinee performance at once. Snitz rehearses with so much enthusiasm that the people of the house decide that a murder is being committed and call in the police. Snitz escapes and runs to the theatre where the audience is impatiently waiting for the arrival of Virginia. Virginia arrives, followed by the police with exciting results both to Snitz and the audience.

Why I Hate the Liquor Traffic.
(From Latest Address of Governor J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana.)

"Personally, I have seen so much of the evils of the liquor traffic in the last four years, so much of its economic waste, so much of its physical ruin, so much of its mental blight, so much of its tears and heart ache, that I have come to regard the business as one that must be held under controlled by strong and effective laws.

I bear no malice toward those engaged in the business, but I hate the traffic.

I hate its every phase.
I hate it for its intolerance.
I hate it for its arrogance.
I hate it for its hypocrisy.
I hate it for its cant and craft and false pretense.

I hate it for its commercialism.
I hate it for its greed and avarice.
I hate it for its sordid love of gain at any price.

I hate it for its domination in politics.

I hate it for its corrupting influence in civic affairs.

I hate it for its incessant effort to debauch the suffrage of the country; for the cowards it makes of public men.

I hate it for its utter disregard of law.

I hate it for its ruthless trampling of the solemn compacts of state constitutions.

I hate it for the load it straps to labor's back, for the palsied hands it gives to toil, for its wounds to genius, for the tragedies of its might have-beens.

I hate it for the human wrecks it has caused.

I hate it for the almshouses it peoples, for the prisons it fills, for the insanity it begets, for its countless graves in potter's fields.

I hate it for the mental ruin it imposes upon its victims, for its spiritual blight, for its moral degradation.

I hate it for the crimes it has committed.

I hate it for the homes it has destroyed.

I hate it for the hearts it has broken.

I hate it for the malice it has planted in the hearts of men—for its poison, for the bitterness—for the dead sea fruit with which it starves their souls.

I hate it for the grief it causes womanhood—the scalding tears, the hopes deferred, the strangled aspirations, its burden of want and care.

I hate it for its heartless cruelty to the aged, the infirm and the helpless, for the shadow it throws upon the lives of children, for its monstrous injustice to blameless little ones.

I hate it as virtue hates vice, as truth hates error, as righteousness hates sin, as justice hates wrong, as liberty hates tyranny, as freedom hates oppression.

I hate it as Abraham Lincoln hated slavery.

And as he sometimes saw in prophetic vision the end of slavery and the coming of the time when the sun should shine and the rain should fall upon no slave in all the Republic, so I sometimes seem to see the end of this unholy traffic, the coming of the time when, if it does not wholly cease to be, it shall find no safe habitation anywhere beneath 'Old Glory's' stainless stars."

Ex-Governor Glenn, of North Carolina, said: "In carrying out the oath to do what I could for the people of North Carolina, I felt that as a business, educational, religious position, there was nothing I could do that would so build up the commonwealth as to rid the state of the manufacture and sale of strong drink. The curse of strong drink brings mourning instead of rejoicing; tears instead of laughter; rags instead of clothing; disease instead of health; insanity instead of strong mind; crime instead of law and order; death instead of life."

The Federal Trades council of Colorado City, Colorado, adopted resolutions favoring state and nation wide prohibition. The Iowa Labor Federation refused to adopt an anti-prohibition resolution by a vote of 70 to 35.

sugar manufacture does not begin until October 1, according to this statement, and all the sugar which the nine factories in operation in California are turning out has been and is contracted for at prices below those at present quoted in New York, it was stated.

Light Cargoes for Europe.

Every ship that sails out of New York for English ports these days sails light, though England is begging for food.

The liner Celtic left yesterday with 5,000 tons of foodstuffs, when she might have carried 16,000 tons. The Kroeland left the other day with 4,500 tons and room for 8,000 more. The Adriatic, St. Paul, New York, Philadelphia and others of the thirteen ships of the International Mercantile Marine which have departed for England since the war was started, have ridden high in the water because of their lightness of cargo. Other lines tell the same story.

mur and inaction by the Belgian army."

Communication Cut Off.

London, Aug. 21.—Communication was today entirely cut off from Liege, Namur, Antwerp and Brussels.

Belgians Retire in Good Order.

Ghent, Aug. 21.—The war office at Antwerp states: "The Belgian army is retiring in good order and the soldiers are having a well earned rest. "The German's advance columns at Liege suffered heavy losses."

Occupation Officially Announced.

London, Aug. 21.—The following information was given out by the official bureau this afternoon:

"The Belgian field army, confronted by superior numbers, has fallen back. The Belgian troops have admirably performed their duty in delaying the hostile advance and enabling their allies to complete their concentration."

A dispatch to the Times from Brussels says: "The Germans in strong force mostly cavalry and artillery, entered Tirlemont early yesterday afternoon (Tuesday.)"

The big guns shelled the place while the cavalry played at war by attacking the flying, panic-stricken populace, shooting and sticking them at random.

Refugees Left Everything Behind

About five miles from the town two trains were made up and fully 1000 refugees got away. So swift and terrible had been the onslaught of the Germans that in flight for their lives, men, women and children left everything behind. Never have I seen such a picture of woe as that presented by a group composed of a peasant woman and five children, standing bewildered in the square, crying as though their hearts would break. The woman said:

"They shot my husband before my eyes and trampled two of my children to death."

The last glimpse that the refugees

had of Tirlemont showed smoke and flames in different quarters of the town.

German Losses Were Terrible. Regarding the situation at Louvain, the Brussels correspondent of the Central News says:

"When the Germans brought their Louvain, the Belgian troops decided to evacuate the place in order to save the beautiful and historic city from destruction. Therefore, they took up strong positions on the road to Brussels."

"The German losses around Louvain were terrible. The Germans still persist in advancing in close formation, whereupon the Belgian machine guns sweep them down like nincompoops."

The Brussels correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, telegraphing Tuesday night says:

"The Germans seem to be moving in the direction of Antwerp. Any Belgian backward movement in that direction may, therefore, be explained as strategic maneuvering which points to the early discomfiture of the enemy."

RUSH OGDEN BREAKS LEG AT MINERAL SPRINGS PARK

Rush Ogden is suffering the pain and inconvenience of a broken leg as the result of his attempt to have some fun with the slide at Mineral Springs park yesterday. Mr. Ogden was a member of a party that was holding a picnic at the park. With the others he had finished the substantial part of the supper and was waiting for the ice cream, when he concluded to take a slide. He had his slide, but when he wound up at the foot of the incline he found that his leg was broken in two places between the ankle and knee. Several nurses who were with the picnicers attended to the injured man and he was brought to his home on the train. The management of the Mineral Spring park should change the slide, as in its present shape it is a dangerous apparatus. After reaching the foot of the slide proper there is a short platform and from this platform the slider is bumped quite a distance to the hard ground below. Several persons have been more or less injured by children it ought to be made less hurt at the slide and as it is safer than it is.

TOTAL ECLIPSE OF THE SUN IN EUROPE

which they cannot comprehend, the obscuring of the great luminary just around mid-day, may incite a feeling of terror that might upset the plans of the generals.

Time was when such a phenomenon would undoubtedly have been construed as an omen, the demonstration of God's displeasure with the warring nations.

The eclipse today is the most important one of the year. It casts total darkness over a strip of Russia, running from Rigodon on the Baltic, to the Crimea, stretching through the polar regions of North America through Scandinavia, Asia Minor, Persia and India.

All of Europe, a portion of Africa and Asia, falls within the partial eclipse, the shadow of the penumbra. Where the eclipse is but partial, the disc of the moon creeps across the face of the sun little by little but will never wholly obscure the orb.

But, where the eclipse is total, the moon entirely covers the sun and the inhabitants in that region will see the most wonderful phenomenon known to astronomers,—the corona of the sun. Great waves of incandescent gas, hundreds of thousands of miles long, reaching out from the sun into the ether, may be perceived. The countryside takes on a sinister night-gray color and tints of nature pale and deaden as at twilight. The temperature falls perceptibly and birds, believing night has come, hush their singing and seek their nests.

The eclipse is a recurring one. It happens at the end of every eighteen years and eleven days. It is caused by the moon coming between the sun and the earth at such an angle that the sun is wholly obscured from a part of the earth and partially shut off from a much greater area. The eclipse that occurred today was observed July 28, 1878, and Aug. 9, 1896.

In Russia the total eclipse lasts a few minutes more than two hours, with a partial eclipse of a like period. In France, Belgium and Germany, the partial eclipse lasts about an hour and a half, from eleven o'clock in the morning until half an hour past noon. In the northern part of the United States where the partial eclipse was visible, it occurred between five and six o'clock this morning.

OUTINGS

Thursday evening, W. A. Hagerty, Esq., gathered at Locust lodge fifteen male citizens of Clearfield, the object being to feed the hungry and rest the weary. None of those who were invited to partake of Mr. Hagerty's hospitality, declined, and the fifteen men who sat down to one of Mrs. Hagerty's famous dinners demonstrated their ability to demolish victuals in a manner which would have been exhilarating to the food trust. If the table under which these fifteen men and their genial host stretched their legs did not groan it was because it saw that it would be useless. The viands set before the hungry men would have tempted the worst dyspeptic that ever lived, and the manner in which the eatables disappeared would have brought tears to the eyes of a hotel proprietor.

It was asseverated that several members of the party had prepared for the repast by abstaining from eating supper at home. We cannot vouch for this statement, but we know that one or two of the guests ate as if they had not had a meal for at least a day before they arrived at Locust lodge. As a host Mr. Hagerty is par excellence, and with the assistance of Mrs. Hagerty the guests spent a most delightful evening, being sorry that other affairs recalled them to town. Mr. Hagerty's guests were Judge Bell, William I. Betts, George R. Bigler, Senator Dimeling, Howard Hartwick, Dr. J. L. R. Reichhold, James H. Kelley, W. Clark Miller, Oscar Mitchell, Craig Norris, Horace S. Whiteman, Jr. Frank Snyder, Matt Savage, A. M. Thatcher and J. R. Bixler.

A. H. Woodward's Sunday school class held a picnic at Mineral Spring yesterday afternoon. The following people were present: Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Woodward Mr. and Mrs. R.

M. Ogden, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Thorn, Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gearhart, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. McCord, Mrs. M. LaBar, Mrs. Minnie Ross, Mrs. Dunkap, Mrs. E. L. Shirey, Mrs. Goss and baby, Mrs. Elmer Shirey, Mrs. Forest Livingston, Mrs. D. W. Anderson, Mrs. Joe McMurray, Misses Dorothy Woodward, Edna Johnson, Frances Shea, Mary Irwin, Maude Powell, and Mrs. George Shirk, of Oelwein, Iowa, nee Miss Mayne Owens.

Misses Eleanor and Lorraine Thurston and Emma Baughman attended the picnic at New Milport, the guest of their grandmother, Mrs. Thomas Moore, yesterday.

Judge Whitehead Coming.

Judge Harvey W. Whitehead, of Williamsport, will be here to help Judge Bell at the September term. Judge Bell will hold court for Judge Reed in Brookville next week, and will preside at court for Judge Whitehead in Lycoming county in October.

PHILIPSBURG GETS THE DISTRICT CONVENTION

Philipsburg had little trouble in capturing the annual convention of the firemen's association of this district, for 1915, at the meeting at Patton Thursday. The Philipsburg firemen worked for the convention and did not content themselves with mailing letters which were not read. The Clearfield firemen displayed too much modesty to secure the convention. The vote was 52 for Philipsburg and 37 for Clearfield.

Clearfield did not get any of the officers of the association, the result of the election being: President, J. Frank Kephart, Philipsburg; first vice president, J. E. Johnson, DuBois; second vice president, John Davis, Winburne; secretary, W. C. Langford, Houtzdale; treasurer, Frank W. Grebe, Philipsburg.

Robert Simcox, of Patton was elected a delegate to the state convention at Harrisburg in October and Joseph Phillips, of Clearfield, was chosen alternate.

The parade was a big affair and other features of the convention were enjoyable.

GERMANS NOW OCCUPY BELGIAN CAPITAL

BELGIANS PUT UP BRAVE RESISTENCE BUT ARE OVERWHELMED BY INVADERS

King Albert, of Belgium, and His Cabinet Have Removed to Antwerp

ANTWERP BEING PREPARED FOR ATTACK

70,000 British Troops Said to be in That City, Awaiting an Assault by the German Forces—Defenses of Antwerp Being Strengthened and Resistance to the Forward Movements of the Kaiser's Troops is Expected to be Desperate—Belgians at Brussels Were Defeated Because They Were Outnumbered by the Germans—German Soldiers Reported to Have Slain Private Citizens.

(By International News Service)

Ghent, Aug. 21.—The German troops entered Brussels yesterday afternoon. King Albert of Belgium has arrived at Antwerp. The German cavalry established their headquarters at the Hotel Deville. The Germans have inaugurated a provisional government for Brussels.

The defenses of Antwerp are being strengthened preparatory to an expected siege, and the outlying woods are being destroyed to prevent the Germans from using them as a cover in the attack. Thousands of cattle and sheep are being driven into the Antwerp driving parks to be used for food for the defenders of the city.

75,000 British Troops in City.

It is reported that 75,000 British troops are in Antwerp and its environs, awaiting the German attack. Guns from the British warships have been removed to the city and will be used against the invaders.

"Yesterday's fighting at Aerschot was extremely hot. The appearance of two German aviators was the first intimation that the Germans, who had been repulsed on the previous evening, intended to renew the attack. Flying low, the German aviators surveyed the position and then returned to report."

Belgians Fought Bravely.

Soon afterward, the German infantry, supported by machine guns and artillery, opened a fierce attack. The Belgians were outnumbered, but put up a desperate resistance.

The troops on both sides fought like demons, and the battle soon became a veritable butchery. Two Belgian regiments, which already had distinguished themselves in the forts at Liege, held the invaders in check for two hours. Both sides were losing heavily when the retreat was sounded.

Major Gilson, whose nose had been broken by a bullet, took charge of the Belgian rear guard, which fought so stubbornly that only seven out of his force of 288 returned.

Retirement Explained.

Paris, Aug. 21.—War office interprets the shotless fall of Brussels as a strategic movement, catching the German army in a trap, adding: "The Germans caught between Antwerp and Namur, now lack the first requirement for a march through Belgium, namely, free passage by the river Meuse through Liege and Namur." Japan's War Preparations Going Ahead Rapidly

(By International News Service)

Tokio, Aug. 21.—The government has declared a strict censorship of war news. Censors are scrutinizing all dispatches. Preparations for a war with Germany are going ahead rapidly.

The newspapers display the statement of Japan's ultimatum sent to Germany, at the request of England, after a long diplomatic consultation.

Kaiser Will Not Yield.

London, Aug. 21.—According to information received in official circles last evening Emperor William has ordered that resistance be made to the last to Japan's attempt to oust Germany from Kiaochow.

FIVE PERSONS KILLED AND MANY INJURED IN STORM

Five persons killed, seven seriously injured and twenty five others less, partially hurt in Wilkes-Barre yesterday when a severe electrical storm approaching a cyclone in force, swept the southern section, known as the Heights, and part of the Wilkes-Barre township.

It was part of this storm that visited Clearfield, bringing with it hail and severe electrical displays.

Pope's Body Viewed by Hundreds

(By International News Service)

Rome, Aug. 21.—The pope's sister is not dead, as reported, but is low from shock.

The pope's body was removed today to St. Peter's where thousands of mourners are hourly passing the bier.

There is a movement by the so-called political cardinals to have a truce declared during the funeral period.

NEW BOILER HOUSE AT PHILIPSBURG COMPLETED

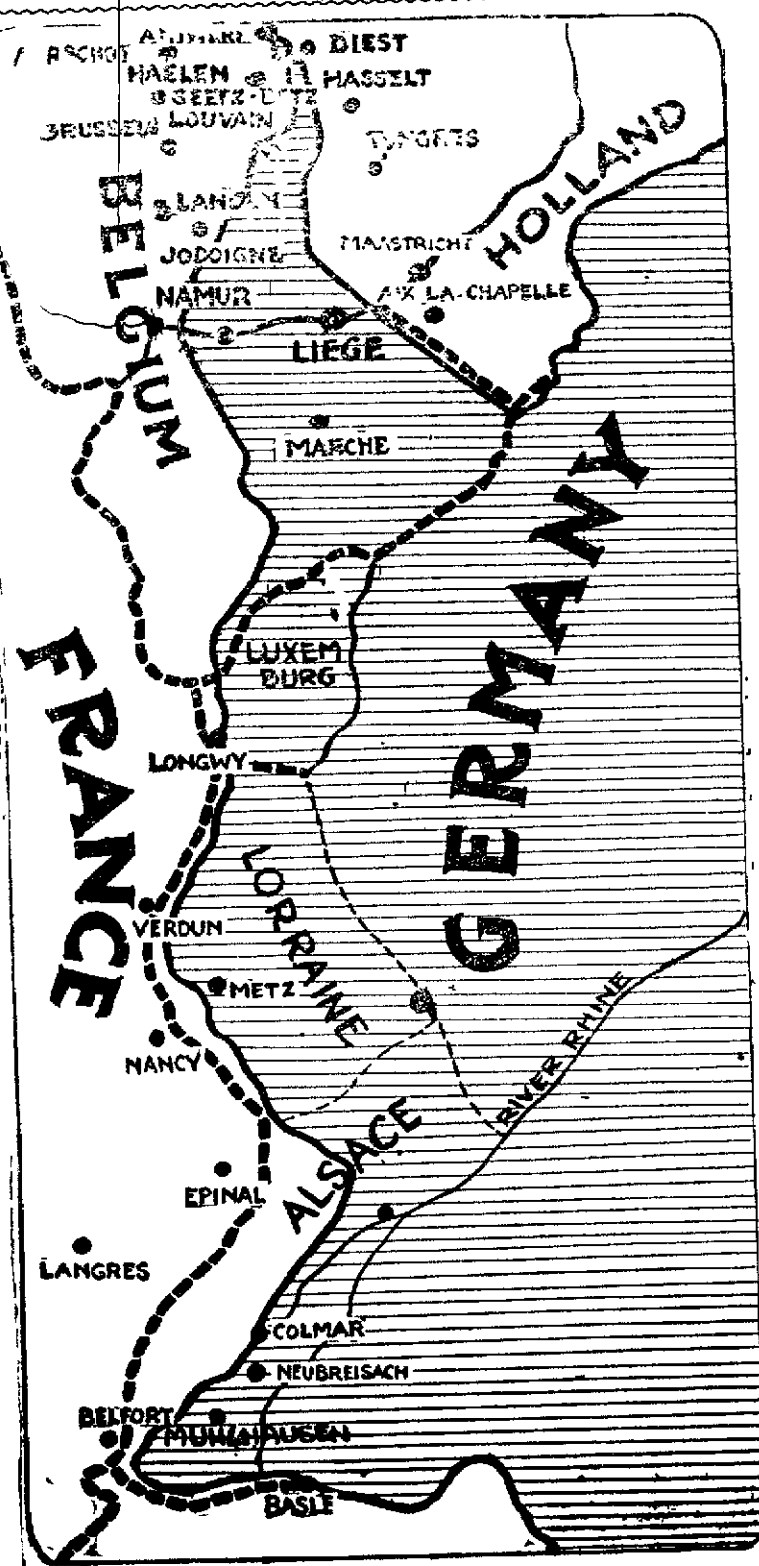

The new 500 horse power boiler at the Penn Public Service company's power plant in Philipsburg was fired a day or two ago. Inasmuch as that plant furnishes electricity to Clearfield, Curwensville, Osceola, Philipsburg and many other towns in this region, this increased power capacity will be greatly appreciated by the many patrons of the company assuring, as it does, an improved service.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Attorney General McReynolds is reported to be preparing to draw indictments against the boosters of food prices. The president has urged McReynolds "to go the limit."

The second batch of indictments is in sight against the "food trust."

Sugar Men Explain.

New York, Aug. 21.—The domestic sugar producers issued a statement disclaiming responsibility for the present high prices of sugar. Except in California where beets mature earlier than elsewhere in the United States, the season for beet

Despite the wide-spread knowledge of astronomy of the present day, it may well be said that the peasants of Central Europe and Russia, drafted as they have been from their homes and fields to fight in a warlike purpose of

British Aeroplane Falls and Pilot is Killed

(By International News Service)

Paris, Aug. 21.—British aeroplane number 391 fell, it is reported at the war office, (location censored.)

Pilot A. F. Seard was killed and the observer, Robert Smith Barry was injured, but is likely to recover.

The machine was flying 1,200 feet high. Note, probably operating in the suburbs of Antwerp.

(By International News Service)

Paris, Aug. 21.—The war office inferentially admits that the Germans are driving a wedge between the French operating on the Belgian frontier and the right wing invading Alsace. The latter has fallen back before the Germans to the Seille river.

Unlocked for Check.

This unlocked for check threatens to interfere seriously with the Alsatian campaign, despite the recapture of Muelhausen from the Germans. The German losses there are now learned to have been appalling.

Rough Rider Brigade.

The war office announces the organization complete of "Rough Rider" squads, some of whom are American globe trotter soldiers of fortune.

The Rough Riders will operate chiefly as scouts on reconnoitering expeditions and spy work. A fleet of armored automobiles is included in their equipment.

Report Only One Revered.

London, Aug. 21.—A Central News dispatch from Berlin states that the yesterday was at Schirneck, on the only reverse the Germans suffered Strassburg road.

A dispatch to the Times from Paris says that the first point at which the Germans crossed the French frontier was at Cirey-sur-Vesou. Since then there has been continued fighting in that region until a day or two ago when it ended in the victorious advance of the French forces, who inflicted a decisive defeat on the enemy and drove them back across the frontier at Lunenburg.

The correspondent says that the laconic reports of the French minister of war give little idea of the desperate struggle that occurred around a handful of villages scattered along the French border. Point after point was taken and retaken by one side or the other.

America Will Reject Proposal.

Washington, Aug. 21.—President Wilson still has not been officially informed of China's request that America assume trusteeship over Kiaochow. The highest official circles state the president is certain to reject the proposition, being strongly opposed to anything comprising America's neutrality.

Friday August 21, 1914.

Good evening! Endeavor to be a good booster and many of your sins will be forgiven.

Any way, little Belgium gave the kaiser's troops a good run for their money.

When two or more men get together these days they are either talking war or baseball.

William Watson, England's poet laureate, has written a poem on the siege of Liege, for which poem, it ought to be said at the start, the Belgians are not to be held responsible.

Will somebody explain why it is necessary for a crowd of a half-hundred young men and women to escort a half dozen passengers to the railroad station on Sunday evenings?

Clearfield firemen are either too bashful or lack energy when it comes to asking for the annual convention of the firemen's association of this district. Phillipsburg firemen go after what they want and generally get it.

By the way, what with the singing of foreign songs, why not give us that good old American song, "The Star Spangled Banner," oftener? Even those foreign born citizens who are taking great interest in the war in Europe might join in singing the national song of the country in which they make their living without doing injury to their consciences.

CLEARFIELD COUNTY SOIL.

When the Clearfield county farmer is urged to buy farming lands in the north, west or south he is often told untruths to induce him to abandon the lands in Clearfield to try the experiment of farming in an unknown climate and under conditions entirely different from those which surround him at home. It is not denied that there are some good farms elsewhere, but it is equally true that the soil of Clearfield county, if properly worked and intelligently fertilized, is equal in productive powers to that of any other part of the country.

The man who cannot make good in Clearfield county will not make good in any other part of the country. No farmer can make a living in Canada, Florida or California unless he has money with which to maintain himself and family until his new farm is productive. The farmer who remains in Clearfield county can get along as well in this county as he would in any of the above places, if he will give his everybody's gettin' a change but me."

Reassured

"Daughter," called the irate father

attention to his farm. Going somewhere else with the expectation that the land is so rich that crops will grow without any effort on the part of the farmer is as foolish as to expect a fortune from an inmate of an almshouse.

There are farmers in Clearfield who have made a success of the business of tilling the soil. These are the farmers who cannot be lured away from their home county by statements of the great productiveness of the bleak prairies of Canada, the mosquito-infested lands of New Jersey or the agent-plastered sandhills of the south. Almost any citizen can name farmers in Clearfield county who have grown wonderful crops because they know how to farm and are content with the unsurpassed climate of this country. And what is said here relative to the farmer is equally applicable to the fruit grower.

THE DEATH OF THE POPE.

To the believers in the Catholic faith the death of Pope Pius X brings as much grief and regret as would the death of any of the rulers of Europe to their subjects. Pope Pius was born a peasant and attained his high position in the church through his natural talents and his personal efforts. He is spoken of as a man who lived simply, thus setting an example which taught honesty, sobriety and peace.

That the pope's death was hastened by the course being pursued by the rulers of Europe who are now engaged in battling against each other in a war of aggression there is not the least doubt. The present war was regarded with horror by the pope, as it must be by all civilized people, but the aged pontiff's heart was so grieved by the butchery which is going on that he neglected to care for himself and thus gave his disease a chance to overcome him.

THAT EXPERT'S FIGURES.

There is nothing to be wondered at in borough council's expression of dissatisfaction with the figures presented by the expert employed by the water company relative to the financial and physical condition of the Clearfield Water company. Those figures are not what council wanted. They were apparently submitted to confuse the public mind and cause the friends of municipal ownership of public utilities to abandon the hope of owning the water plant.

We believe the water company is earnest in its desire to give the council the information the latter asks for relative to the water plant, but the expert accountant has done nothing more than muddle the matter, failing to give council the actual cost of construction and maintenance of the water plant. The water company, having the figures of the expert at its command, can meet the council's wishes, and will no doubt do so, within the time allotted for the acquisition of the desired information.

"Of course, I'd like to vote," said Mrs. McGudley. "But I dunno's I'd ever get a chance to exercise my right to vote even if I had it."
"Couldn't you go to the polls and cast your ballot, like anybody else?"

THE CASE OF JENNIE BRICE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1913, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"Employing my leisure time in writing a play," quoted Mr. Howell. "Exactly. The husband and wife were not on good terms. They quarreled frequently. On Sunday they fought all day, and Mrs. Ladley told Mrs. Pitman she was married to a fiend. At 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon Philip Ladley went out, returning about 5. Mrs. Pitman carried their supper to them at 6, and both ate heartily. She did not see Mrs. Ladley at the time, but heard her in the next room. They were apparently reconciled. Mrs. Pitman reports Mr. Ladley in high good humor. If the quarrel recommenced during the night the other boarder, named Reynolds, in the next room heard nothing. Mrs. Pitman was up and down until 1 o'clock, when she dozed off. She heard no unusual sound.

"At approximately 2 o'clock in the morning, however, this Reynolds came to the room and said he had heard some one in a boat in the lower hall. He and Mrs. Pitman investigated. The boat, which Mrs. Pitman uses during a flood and which she had tied to the stair rail was gone, having been cut loose, not untied. Everything else was quiet, except that Mrs. Ladley's dog had been shut in a third story room.

"At a quarter after 4 that morning Mrs. Pitman, thoroughly awake, heard the boat returning and, going to the stairs, met Ladley coming in. He muttered something about having gone for medicine for his wife and went to his room, shutting the dog out. This is worth attention, for the dog ordinarily slept in their room."

"What sort of a dog?" asked Mr. Howell. He had been listening attentively.

"A water spaniel. The rest of the night or early morning was quiet. At a quarter after 7 Ladley asked for coffee and toast for one, and on Mrs. Pitman remarking this said that his wife was not playing this week and had gone for a few days' vacation, having left early in the morning. Remember, during the night he had been out for medicine for her. Now she was able to travel and, in fact, had started."

Mr. Howell was frowning at the floor. "If he was doing anything wrong, he was doing it very badly," he said.

"This is where I entered the case," said Mr. Holcombe. "I rowed into the lower hall this morning to feed the dog Peter, who was whining on the staircase. Mrs. Pitman was coming down, pale and agitated over the fact that the dog shortly before had found floating in the parlor downstairs a slipper belonging to Mrs. Ladley and later a knife with a broken blade. She maintains that she had the knife last night upstairs, that it was not broken and that it was taken from a shelf in her room while she dozed. The question is, then, Why was the knife taken? Who took it and why? Has this man made away with his wife or has he not?"

Mr. Howell looked at me and smiled. "Mr. Holcombe and I are old enemies," he said. "Mr. Holcombe believes that circumstantial evidence may probably hang a man; I do not." And to Mr. Holcombe, "So, having found a wet slipper and a broken knife, you are prepared for murder and sudden death?"

"I have more evidence," Mr. Holcombe said eagerly, and proceeded to tell what we had found in the room. Mr. Howell listened, smiling to himself, but at the mention of the onyx clock he got up and went to the mantel.

"By Jove!" he said and stood looking at the mark in the dust. "Are you sure the clock was here yesterday?"

"I found it right before last and put the key underneath. Yesterday, before they moved up, I found it again."

"The key is gone also. Well, what of it, Holcombe? Did he brain her with the clock or choke her with the key?"

Mr. Holcombe was looking at his notebook. "To summarize," he said, "we have here as clues indicating a crime, the rope, the broken knife, the slipper, the towel and the clock. Besides, this scrap of paper may contain some information." He opened it and sat gazing at it in his palm. "Then, 'Is this Ladley's writing?'" he asked me in a curious voice.

"Yes."

I glanced at the slip. Mr. Holcombe had just read from his notebook: "Rope, knife, slipper, towel, clock."

The slip I had found behind the washstand said "Rope, knife, shoe, towel. Horn." The rest of the last word was torn off.

Mr. Howell was staring at the mantel. "Clock?" he repeated.

CHAPTER IV.

It was after four when Mr. Holcombe had finished going over the room. I offered to make both the gentlemen some tea, for Mr. Pitman had been an Englishman, and I had got into the habit of having a cupful in the afternoon, with a cracker or a bit of bread. But they refused. Mr. Howell said he had promised to meet a lady, and to bring her through the flooded district in a boat. He shook hands with me and smiled at Mr. Holcombe.

"You will have to restrain his enthusiasm, Mrs. Pitman," he said. "He is a bloodhound on the scent. If his baying gets on your nerves just send for me." He went down the stairs and stepped into the boat. "Remember, Holcombe," he called, "every well constituted murder has two things—a motive and a corpse. You haven't either, only a mass of piling details."

"If everybody waited until he saw flames instead of relying on the testimony of the smoke," Mr. Holcombe snapped, "what would the fire loss be?"

Mr. Howell poled his boat to the front door and, sitting down, prepared to row out.

"You are warned, Mrs. Pitman," he called to me. "If he doesn't find a body to fit the clues he's quite capable of making one to fill the demand."

"Horn!" said Mr. Holcombe, looking at the slip again. "The tail of the 'n' is torn off—evidently only part of a word. Hornet, Horning, Horner—Mrs. Pitman, will you go with me to the police station?"

I was more than anxious to go. In fact, I could not bear the idea of staying alone in the house, with heaven only knows what concealed in the depths of that muddy flood. I got on my wryms again, and Mr. Holcombe rowed me out. Peter plunged into the water to follow and had to be sent back. He sat on the lower step and whined. Mr. Holcombe threw him another piece of liver, but he did not touch it.

We rowed to the corner of Robinson

I Told Him Everything.

street and Federal—it was before Federal street was raised above the flood level—and left the boat in charge of a boy there. And we walked to the police station. On the way Mr. Holcombe questioned me closely about the events of the morning, and I recalled the incident of the burned pillow slip. He made a note of it at once and grew very thoughtful.

He left me, however, at the police station. "I'd rather not appear in this, Mrs. Pitman," he said apologetically, "and I think better along my own lines—not that I have anything against the police; they've done some splendid work. But this case takes imagination, and the police department deals with facts. We have no facts yet. What we need, of course, is to have the man detained until we are sure of our case."

He lifted his hat and turned away, and I went slowly up the steps to the police station. Living, as I had, in a neighborhood where the police, like the poor, are always with us, and where the visits of the patrol wagon are one of those familiar sights that no amount of repetition enabled any of us to treat with contempt, I was uncomfortable until I remembered that my grandfather had been one of the first mayors of the city and that, if the patrol had been at my house more than once, the entire neighborhood would testify that my boarders were usually orderly.

At the door some one touched me on the arm. It was Mr. Holcombe's again. "I have been thinking it over," he said, "and I believe you'd better not mention the piece of paper that you found behind the washstand. They might say the whole thing is a hoax."

"Very well," I agreed, and went in.

The police sergeant in charge knew me at once, having stopped at my house more than once in flood time for a cup of hot coffee.

"Sit down, Mrs. Pitman," he said. "I suppose you are still making the best coffee and doughnuts in the city of Allegheny? Well, what's the trouble in your district? Want an injunction against the river for trespass?"

"The river has brought me a good bit of trouble," I said. "I'm—I'm worried, Mr. Sergeant. I think a woman from my house has been murdered, but I don't know."

"Murdered?" he said, and drew up his chair. "Tell me about it."

I told him everything, while he sat back with his eyes half closed and his fingers beating a tattoo on the arm of his chair.

When I finished he got up and went into an inner room. He came back in a moment.

"I want you to come in and tell that to the chief," he said, and led the way. All told, I repeated my story three times that afternoon—to the sergeant to the chief of police and the third time to both the others and two detectives.

The second time the chief made notes of what I said.

"Know this man Ladley?" he asked the others. None of them did, but they all knew of Jennie Brice and some of them had seen her in the theater.

"Get the theater, Tom," the chief said to one of the detectives.

Luckily what he learned over the telephone from the theater corroborated my story. Jennie Brice was not in the cast that week, but should have reported that morning (Monday) to rehearse the next week's piece. No message had been received from her and a substitute had been put in her place.

The chief hung up the receiver and turned to me. "You are sure about the clock, Mrs. Pitman?" he asked. "It was there when they moved upstairs to the room?"

"Yes, sir."

"You are certain you will not find it on the parlor mantel when the water goes down?"

"The mantels are uncovered now. It is not there."

"You think Ladley has gone for good?"

"Yes, sir."

"He'd be a fool to try to run away, unless—Graves, you'd better get hold of the fellow, and keep him until either the woman is found or the body. The river is falling. In a couple of days we will know if she is around the premises anywhere."

Before I left I described Jennie Brice for them carefully. Asked what she probably wore, if she had gone away as her husband said, I had no idea; she had a lot of clothes, and dressed a good bit. But I recalled that I had seen lying on the bed the black and white dress with the red collar, and they took that down, as well as the brown valise.

The chief rose and opened the door for me. "If she actually left town at the time you mention," he said, "she ought not to be hard to find. There are not many trains before 7 in the morning, and most of them are local."

"Not unless Ladley is more of a fool than I think he is," he said, smiling. "Personally I believe she has gone away, as he says she did. But if she hasn't, he probably took the body with him when he said he was getting medicine and dropped it in the current somewhere. But we must go slow with all this. There's no use shouting 'wolf' yet."

"But—the towel?"

"He may have cut himself shaving. It has been done."

"And the knife?"

He shrugged his shoulders good naturedly.

"I've seen a perfectly good knife spoiled opening a bottle of pickles."

"But the slipper? And the clock?"

"My good woman, enough shoes and slippers are forgotten in the bottoms of cupboards year after year in flood time and are found floating around the streets to make all the old clothes men in town happy. I have seen almost everything floating about during one of these annual floods."

"I dare say you never saw an onyx clock floating around," I replied a little sharply. I had no sense of humor that day. He stopped smiling at once and stood tugging at his mustache.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

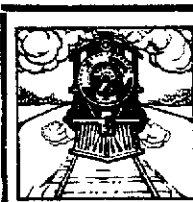

Take Salts to flush Kidneys and neutralize irritating acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning scalding sensation and is very pro-irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse use again, there is difficulty in voiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs while then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

ENGLISHMEN DISCUSSES

PAY OF R. R. EMPLOYEES

James H. Thomas, labor member of parliament for Derby, England, and financial secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, corresponding to one of the brotherhoods of railway employees in this country, is visiting Pittsburgh, among other places, en tour, investigating railway operation here in his official capacity as a member of the British parliament.

Yesterday he was entertained with a luncheon and in the course of some remarks made in response to a toast declared that American railway employees are very much more adequately compensated than are those elsewhere, even taking into account the higher cost of living in this country, which, he said, with the sole exception of rents, does not exceed that in England by more than 40 per cent whereas wages for relative classes of labor are more than double. He has found, also, he added, that first cost of railway construction is lower here than abroad owing to lower cost of land for right-of-way and terminals, more economical administration and the use of rolling stock of far greater capacity and much more powerful motive power, from which he deduces that an American railroad is able to perform a standard unit of service at less cost than an English road. In conclusion, Mr. Thomas declared he has not found nearly the sentiment for government ownership of the rail carriers here that obtains in England.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

MILTON STOCK AND HIS FAMOUS FLUKE HOME RUN

BY FRANK G. MENKE

(By International News Service)

New York, Aug. 21.—Milton Stock, the Giant's third sacker, treated himself to a fluke home run the other day and it immediately started discussion concerning freak and lengthy circuit swats. Many trotted forth stories of other home runs, but it was voted that Stock was about the flukeiest that had happened in a long time.

Stock's drive smashed into the bag at third base and then bounced into one of the boxes. The rival third sacker recovered the ball almost before Stock had rounded first, but the umpires, declaring the ball had landed outside the playing field, after first hitting fair, gave Stock a home.

"Cy" Young, the old Cleveland pitcher, hit out a four bagger in Cleveland one day. The ball skimmed along the first base line and made for the score board which then was in short right field. The ball hit under the board and into the little space between the board and a fence. Before the outfielder could dig it out, "Cy," who frequently has made 100 yards in 47 seconds, "tore" around the bases and was credited with a homer.

"Big Bill" Lange, who played with the Chicago team in the old days, whaled a ball over the center field fence in Cincinnati one day. It crashed through the window of a saloon across the street and broke up a pinocchle party just as one of the players was on the point of melding some thing like 400.

"Buck" Freeman, also known as "Home-Run" Freeman, connected with one of Chief Bender's twisters in a game at Philadelphia and, not only lifted the ball out of the lot, but drove it through an open window on the second floor of a house that was a block away from the park.

Joe Jackson, of the Naps, in the opinion of baseball veterans, hit the longest home run in the history of baseball. It was in a game in New York last year. Joe's drive cleared the top of the lofty right field grandstand by at least 40 feet. When last seen, the ball was traveling at a terrific clip, and it was estimated that before the ball landed, it must have been 250 feet clear of the park.

"Home" Zimmerman, the quiet, unassuming, peace-loving third baseman of the Cubs, rapped out a brace of homers in one day in Cincinnati. They cleared the center field fence by about 10 feet each. Home is the only player who ever turned the trick in that ball park.

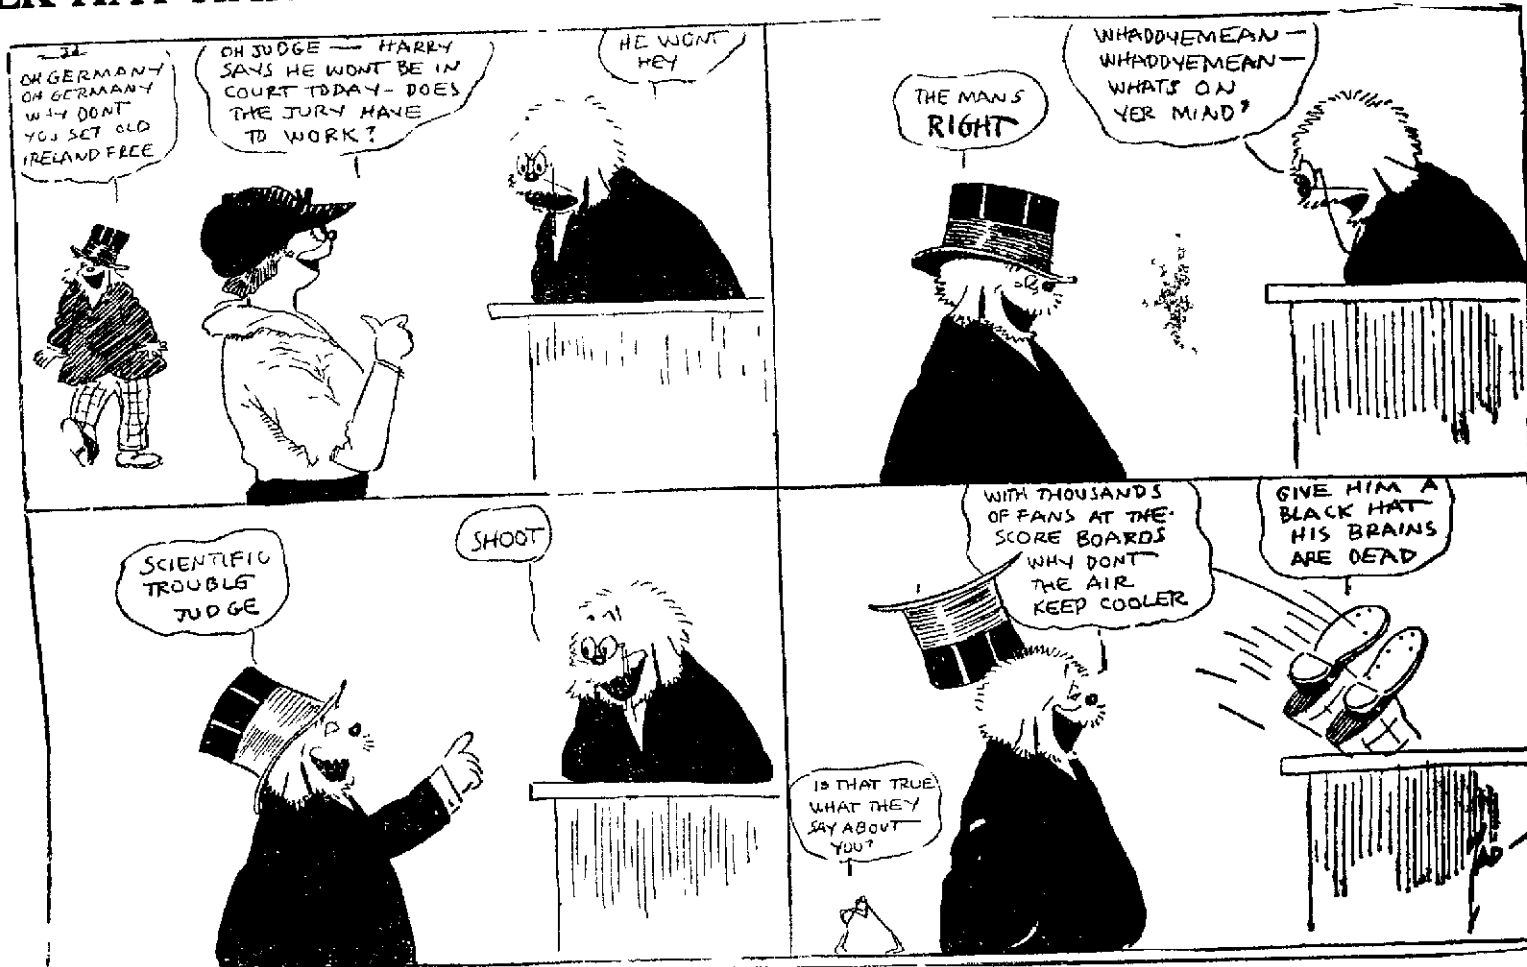

Miller Huggins, of the Cardinals, got a fluke home run. It happened in Cincinnati. Many odd things happen there. Miller lifted a short fly to right. The sun got in the fielder's eye, and the ball dropped ten feet away from him. Before the outfielder could rub the glare out of his peepers, Miller shipped around the bases.

"Buddy" Ryan once upon a time, with the Naps poked out a homer with the bases full in Cleveland a year or two ago. It was one of the few times in baseball history that this four-runs-with-one-smash stunt has been accomplished.

Larry Doyle, of the Giants carved his name in baseball's hall of fame a few weeks ago when he picked out a four bagger in the twenty first inning of the Giants Pirates game. His swat ended the longest combat in big league history.

SILK HAT HARRY'S DIVORCE SUIT

BY TAD

Walter Johnson, one of the Senators, does not hit 'em often but when he does, there's happening.

He connected with a ball in Washington sometime back and hit it so hard he knocked off the cover. The cover landed over second base and the rest of the ball landed a few miles outside the ball park.

Larry Doyle has another claim to fame other than that which came through his blow in Pittsburg. Playing on the Pacific coast, he smashed the ball through the only knothole in the fence. It was in right field. The hole was just a trifle larger than the ball, but Larry drove it square at the hole, and the ball, instead of coming in off, went through.

Cy Seymour hit a ball in Boston and it never touched ground until it reached New York. Cy's drive cleared the fence and the ball dropped in to one of the open cars of a freight train that was passing at the time. It was found by a brakeman when the train reached Gotham.

"WHEN THE HEART CALLS" IS A HEARTSOME PICTURE

"When the Heart Calls" is a 2 reel jump drama. It is a dandy in old time windows by the lake side in the country. One of the most interesting of some ones danger reaches in this. He hurries to the spot and finds two children down on the ground. He picks them up and takes them to their mother. He notices the poverty of the home and in heart is torn. Then he makes a discovery. This is the home of his son whom he lost. He did not know the father wished him to be a son. He is broken in health and the family are nearly destitute. When the heart calls reason departs. Social restriction are forgotten. Everything is smothered in that one great passion of the human soul the desire for friendship love and sympathy.

Rich in sentiment, tremendously appealing, the play which will be shown at the Opera house this evening demands attention from every one.

A Dramatic Mistake

Snitz is so ardent an admirer of the stage that he overlooks such small things as rent. The landlady asks his wife for the rent. After a long persuasion from the landlady's husband who is also too strong to work, Snitz starts in search of a job. Naturally he turns to the stage as an appropriate vocation. He applies to the local temple of Thespis.

but in spite of his showing samples of applied histrionics, he is cruelly turned down. He returns home discouraged.

In the meantime the leading man of the troupe, which is about to play Virginia, becomes incapacitated through too frequent visits with John Barleycorn. The stage manager is in desperation and takes the costume and part to Snitz with instructions to prepare for the matinee performance at once. Snitz rehearses with so much enthusiasm that the people of the house decide that a murder is being committed and call in the police. Snitz escapes and runs to the theatre where the audience is impatiently waiting for the arrival of Virginia. Virginia arrives, followed by the police with exciting results both to Snitz and the audience.

Why I Hate the Liquor Traffic.
(From Latest Address of Governor J. Frank Hanly, of Indiana.)

"Personally, I have seen so much of the evils of the liquor traffic in the last four years, so much of its economic waste, so much of its physical ruin, so much of its mental blight, so much of its tears and heart ache, that I have come to regard the business as one that must be held under controlled by strong and effective laws.

I bear no malice toward those engaged in the business, but I hate the traffic.

I hate its every phase.

I hate it for its intolerance.

I hate it for its arrogance.

I hate it for its hypocrisy.

I hate it for its cant and craft and false pretense.

I hate it for its commercialism.

I hate it for its greed and avarice.

I hate it for its sordid love of gain at any price.

I hate it for its domination in politics.

I hate it for its corrupting influence in civic affairs.

I hate it for its incessant effort to debase the suffrage of the country; for the cowards it makes of public men.

I hate it for its utter disregard of law.

I hate it for its ruthless trampling of the solemn compacts of state constitutions.

I hate it for the load it straps to labor's back, for the palsied hands it gives to toil, for its wounds to genius, for the tragedies of its might have-beens.

I hate it for the human wrecks it has caused.

I hate it for the almshouses it peoples, for the prisons it fills, for the insanity it begets, for its countless graves in potter's fields.

I hate it for the mental ruin it imposes upon its victims, for its spiritual blight, for its moral degradation.

I hate it for the crimes it has committed.

I hate it for the homes it has destroyed.

I hate it for the hearts it has broken.

I hate it for the malice it has planted in the hearts of men—for its poison, for the bitterness—for the dead sea fruit with which it starves their souls.

I hate it for the grief it causes womanhood—the scalding tears, the hopes deferred, the strangled aspirations, its burden of want and care.

I hate it for its heartless cruelty to the aged, the infirm and the helpless, for the shadow it throws upon the lives of children, for its monstrous injustice to blameless little ones.

I hate it as virtue hates vice, as truth hates error, as righteousness hates sin, as justice hates wrong, as liberty hates tyranny, as freedom hates oppression.

I hate it as Abraham Lincoln hated slavery.

And as he sometimes saw in prophetic vision the end of slavery and the coming of the time when the sun should shine and the rain should fall upon no slave in all the Republic, so I sometimes seem to see the end of this unholy traffic, the coming of the time when, if it does not wholly cease to be, it shall find no safe habitation anywhere beneath 'Old Glory's' stainless stars."

Ex-Governor Glenn, of North Carolina, said: "In carrying out the oath to do what I could for the people of North Carolina, I felt that as a business, educational, religious position, there was nothing I could do that would so build up the commonwealth as to rid the state of the manufacture and sale of strong drink. The curse of strong drink brings mourning instead of rejoicing; tears instead of laughter; rags instead of clothing; disease instead of health; insanity instead of strong mind; crime instead of law and order; death instead of life."

The Federal Trades council of Colorado City, Colorado, adopted resolutions favoring state and nation wide prohibition. The Iowa Labor Federation refused to adopt an anti-prohibition resolution by a vote of 70 to 35.

sugar manufacture does not begin until October 1, according to this statement, and all the sugar which the nine factories in operation in California are turning out has been and is contracted for at prices below those at present quoted in New York, it was stated.

Light Cargoes for Europe.

Every ship that sails out of New York for English ports these days sails light, though England is begging for food.

The liner Celtic left yesterday with 5,000 tons of foodstuffs, when she might have carried 16,000 tons. The Kroeland left the other day with 4,500 tons and room for 8,000 more. The Adriatic, St. Paul, New York, Philadelphia and others of the thirteen ships of the International Mercantile Marine which have departed for England since the war was started, have ridden high in the water because of their lightness of cargo. Other lines tell the same story.

GERMANS NOW OCCUPY CAPITAL

mur and inaction by the Belgian army."

Communication Cut Off.

London, Aug. 21.—Communication was today entirely cut off from Liege, Namur, Antwerp and Brussels.

Belgians Retire in Good Order.

Ghent, Aug. 21.—The war office at Antwerp states: "The Belgian army is retiring in good order and the soldiers are having a well earned rest. "The German's advance columns at Liege suffered heavy losses."

Occupation Officially Announced.

London, Aug. 21.—The following information was given out by the official bureau this afternoon:

"The Belgian field army, confronted by superior numbers, has fallen back. The Belgian troops have admirably performed their duty in delaying the hostile advance and enabling their allies to complete their concentration."

A dispatch to the Times from Brussels says: "The Germans in strong force mostly cavalry and artillery, entered Tirlemont early yesterday afternoon (Tuesday.)"

The big guns shelled the place while the cavalry played at war by attacking the flying, panic-stricken populace, shooting and sticking them at random.

About five miles from the town two trains were made up and fully 1000 refugees got away. So swift and terrible had been the onslaught of the Germans that in flight for their lives, men, women and children left everything behind. Never have I seen such a picture of woe as that presented by a group composed of a peasant woman and five children, standing bewildered in the square, crying as though their hearts would break. The woman said:

"They shot my husband before my eyes and trampled two of my children to death."

The last glimpse that the refugees

had of Tirlemont showed smoke and flames in different quarters of the town.

German Losses Were Terrible. Regarding the situation at Louvain, the Brussels correspondent of the Central News says:

"When the Germans brought their Louvain, the Belgian troops decided to evacuate the place in order to save the beautiful and historic city from destruction. Therefore, they took up strong positions on the road to Brussels."

"The German losses around Louvain were terrible. The Germans still persist in advancing in close formation, whereupon the Belgian machine guns sweep them down like daisies."

The Brussels correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, telegraphing Tuesday night says:

"The Germans seem to be moving in the direction of Antwerp. Any Belgian backward movement in that direction may, therefore, be explained as strategic maneuvering which points to the early discomfiture of the enemy."

RUSH OGDEN BREAKS LEG AT MINERAL SPRINGS PARK

Rush Ogden is suffering the pain and inconvenience of a broken leg as the result of his attempt to have some fun with the slide at Mineral Springs park yesterday. Mr. Ogden was a member of a party that was holding a picnic at the park. With the others he had finished the substantial part of the supper and was waiting for the ice cream, when he concluded to take a slide. He had his slide, but when he wound up at the foot of the incline he found that his leg was broken in two places between the ankle and knee. Several nurses who were with the picnicers attended to the injured man and he was brought to his home on the train. The management of the Mineral Spring park should change the slide, as in its present shape it is a dangerous apparatus. After reaching the foot of the slide proper there is a short platform and from this platform the slider is bumped quite a distance to the hard ground below. Several persons have been more or less injured by children it ought to be made less hurt at the slide and as it is safer than it is.

which they cannot comprehend, the obscuring of the great luminary just around mid-day, may incite a feeling of terror that might upset the plans of the generals.

Time was when such a phenomenon would undoubtedly have been construed as an omen, the demonstration of God's displeasure with the warring nations.

The eclipse today is the most important one of the year. It casts total darkness over a strip of Russia, running from Rigodon on the Baltic, to the Crimea, stretching through the polar regions of North America through Scandinavia, Asia Minor, Persia and India.

All of Europe, a portion of Africa and Asia, falls within the partial eclipse, the shadow of the penumbra. Where the eclipse is but partial, the disc of the moon creeps across the face of the sun little by little but will never wholly obscure the orb.

But, where the eclipse is total, the moon entirely covers the sun and the inhabitants in that region will see the most wonderful phenomenon known to astronomers,—the corona of the sun. Great waves of incandescent gas, hundreds of thousands of miles long, reaching out from the sun into the ether, may be perceived. The countryside takes on a sinister night-gray color and tints of nature pale and deaden as at twilight. The temperature falls perceptibly and birds, believing night has come, hush their singing and seek their nests.

The eclipse is a recurring one. It happens at the end of every eighteen years and eleven days. It is caused by the moon coming between the sun and the earth at such an angle that the sun is wholly obscured from a part of the earth and partially shut off from a much greater area. The eclipse that occurred today was observed July 28, 1878, and Aug. 9, 1896.

In Russia the total eclipse lasts a few minutes more than two hours, with a partial eclipse of a like period. In France, Belgium and Germany, the partial eclipse lasts about an hour and a half, from eleven o'clock in the morning until half an hour past noon. In the northern part of the United States where the partial eclipse was visible, it occurred between five and six o'clock this morning.

OUTINGS

Thursday evening, W. A. Hagerty, Esq., gathered at Locust lodge fifteen male citizens of Clearfield, the object being to feed the hungry and rest the weary. None of those who were invited to partake of Mr. Hagerty's hospitality, declined, and the fifteen men who sat down to one of Mrs. Hagerty's famous dinners demonstrated their ability to demolish victuals in a manner which would have been exhilarating to the food trust. If the table under which these fifteen men and their genial host stretched their legs did not groan it was because it saw that it would be useless. The viands set before the hungry men would have tempted the worst dyspeptic that ever lived, and the manner in which the eatables disappeared would have brought tears to the eyes of a hotel proprietor.

It was asseverated that several members of the party had prepared for the repast by abstaining from eating supper at home. We cannot vouch for this statement, but we know that one or two of the guests ate as if they had not had a meal for at least a day before they arrived at Locust lodge. As a host Mr. Hagerty is par excellence, and with the assistance of Mrs. Hagerty the guests spent a most delightful evening, being sorry that other affairs recalled them to town. Mr. Hagerty's guests were Judge Bell, William I. Betts, George R. Bigler, Senator Dimeling, Howard Hartwick, Dr. J. L. R. Reichhold, James H. Kelley, W. Clark Miller, Oscar Mitchell, Craig Norris, Horace S. Whiteman, Jr. Frank Snyder, Matt Savage, A. M. Thatcher and J. R. Bixler.

A. H. Woodward's Sunday school class held a picnic at Mineral Spring yesterday afternoon. The following people were present: Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Woodward Mr. and Mrs. R.

M. Ogden, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Thorn, Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gearhart, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. McCord, Mrs. M. LaBar, Mrs. Minnie Ross, Mrs. Dunkap, Mrs. E. L. Shirey, Mrs. Goss and baby, Mrs. Elmer Shirey, Mrs. Forest Livingston, Mrs. D. W. Anderson, Mrs. Joe McMurray, Misses Dorothy Woodward, Edna Johnson, Frances Shea, Mary Irwin, Maude Powell, and Mrs. George Shirk, of Oelwein, Iowa, nee Miss Mayne Owens.

Misses Eleanor and Lorraine Thurston and Emma Baughman attended the picnic at New Milport, the guest of their grandmother, Mrs. Thomas Moore, yesterday.

Judge Whitehead Coming.

Judge Harvey W. Whitehead, of Williamsport, will be here to help Judge Bell at the September term. Judge Bell will hold court for Judge Reed in Brookville next week, and will preside at court for Judge Whitehead in Lycoming county in October.

PHILIPSBURG GETS THE DISTRICT CONVENTION

Philipsburg had little trouble in capturing the annual convention of the firemen's association of this district, for 1915, at the meeting at Patton Thursday. The Philipsburg firemen worked for the convention and did not content themselves with mailing letters which were not read. The Clearfield firemen displayed too much modesty to secure the convention. The vote was 52 for Philipsburg and 37 for Clearfield.

Clearfield did not get any of the officers of the association, the result of the election being: President, J. Frank Kephart, Philipsburg; first vice president, J. E. Johnson, DuBois; second vice president, John Davis, Winburne; secretary, W. C. Langford, Houtzdale; treasurer, Frank W. Grebe, Philipsburg.

Robert Simcox, of Patton was elected a delegate to the state convention at Harrisburg in October and Joseph Phillips, of Clearfield, was chosen alternate.

The parade was a big affair and other features of the convention were enjoyable.
